A better webcam makes all the difference

Work from home is undoubtedly here to stay, face-to-face meetings have been replaced with virtual ones, and online learning has also become an integral part of education, with many students continuing to learn remotely at all grade levels. With these major cultural shifts, the need for quality webcams that deliver reliable, affordable communication is at an all-time high. While laptops and Chromebooks have built-in options, they typically do not meet the needs for these demanding, and now mainstream, uses. The CA Essential WC-3000 is a plug-and-play webcam that provides a far superior experience and allows for collaboration that is as close to meeting in person as possible.

“Putting our latest webcams through the rigorous Zoom Certification testing process was important to us to ensure we are delivering innovative and reliable technology solutions that users can depend on as they continue to work and learn remotely,” said Steve Erickson, COO at Cyber Acoustics. “The Zoom Certification tells our customers that our webcams meet high standards in video performance, and meet their expectations of high-quality, reliable communication.”

“At Zoom, we bring people together with video communications and empower them to accomplish more, and it’s great to see Cyber Acoustics ensure their products meet the highest quality standards,” said Eric Yu, Head of Hardware Partnership at Zoom. “Their pursuit of Zoom Certification is an example of their commitment to providing products that will meet their customers’ needs.”
